"While many companies spent the first two quarters of 2020 surviving a global pandemic, Q3 has seen more of an adjustment to this new normal. Adapting means different things for different companies, but it almost always means innovation, a focus on people, and clear commitment to a vision." – Mike McCraw, Managing Director

Industry Buzz

"When I look back on all that has transpired, one thing that stands out is the resiliency of the full-service dining industry. In fact, going out to a restaurant with friends and family is the #1 activity consumers say they look forward to doing as the economy opens back up, and we've seen that as our dine-ins reopen across the country."

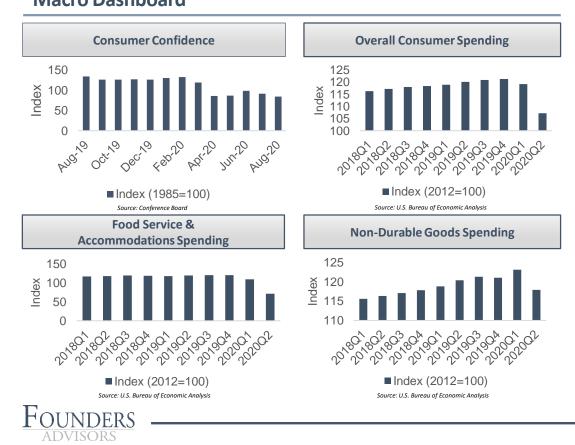

-Eugene Lee, President & CEO, Darden Restaurants

"I think most companies will take a step back, sit down and look at ways to reassess or re-evaluate their operations. We actually looked at the current [economic] situation [as] less of an opportunity to reset and more of an opportunity to re-emerge."

- Charles Guzzetta, President of Burger Fi

"M&A is one of the areas that we identified in our strategic planning process as a big opportunity, and to accelerate that, we are going to focus on the smaller chains. We believe that as things get back to normal, there will be a greater opportunity to acquire some folks who may want to get out of the business."

Consumer Multi-Unit: Lower Middle Market Themes

Q2 M&A Overview

- Due to uncertainty surrounding COVID-19 and widespread closures, M&A activity fell in Q2 2020.
- U.S. deal value fell 85% compared to Q2 2019, with $94B in total announced deals. Globally, Q2 total deal value was down 55% year-over-year, falling from $1,078B to $485B.
- However, preliminary data suggests M&A activity will return in Q3 and Q4 2020 as companies digest the pandemic's effects.

Increasing the Value of a Multi-Unit Business (Chapter 4/4)

For high-growth multi-unit concepts such as restaurants, fitness studios, education centers, and franchises, access to institutional capital through partnership with a debt or equity partner is often critical for streamlining operations and strategically expanding to new locations. Whether owners are looking to grow, recapitalize, or sell, select metrics are commonly evaluated by institutional lenders and investors. Built from our interactions with hundreds of middle-market investors each year, Founders' Financial Readiness Assessment gives an overview of the indicators we see having the greatest impact on multi-unit business valuations.

Founders' Financial Readiness Assessment

Chapter 1

- Same Stores Sales Growth Historical proof, beating expectations and franchisor benchmarks
- Financial Preparedness Consistency of reporting, ability to analyze at lower levels, GAAP
- Average Unit Volume (AUV) Diversification of revenue mix, length of sales cycle, size of transactions

Chapter 2

- EBITDA Margin Exceeding peer/industry benchmarks, ability to sustain, room for growth
- Gross Profit Margin Accurately categorized costs, level of dependence on end market, ability to control
- Cash on Cash Returns Control over buildout costs, success of marketing, ability to meet debt services

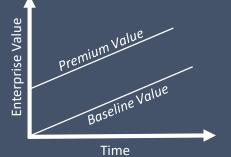

Chapter 3

- Per Person Average Ability to increase wallet share, success of sales initiatives
- Management Team Understanding of weakness, delineation of responsibilities, low levels of turnover
- Site Selection Ability to secure high-traffic, high-visibility locations with attractive lease terms

Chapter 4

- Technology Integration Effectiveness in minimizing disruptions and adapting to consumer preferences
- Process Documentation Consistency of franchising process, employee onboarding, retention strategies
- Talent Retention Retaining key management through profit interests, incentive plans, and stay bonuses

Whether preparing for a recapitalization or outright sale, improving key performance metrics can help unlock a premium valuation for multi-unit businesses.

Although technology continues to transform supply chains, service experiences, and product offerings of virtually all companies, these metrics will continue to function as key operational success indicators. For multi-unit operators, including franchisors and franchisees who are preparing to grow, recapitalize, or sell, understanding these metrics can help realize the highest possible value for business owners.
